A THANK YOU FROM CARDIOFOCUS' CEO TO EVERYONE THAT HAD A PART IN MAKING HEARTLIGHT A SUCCESS

As of December 2020, CardioFocus' customers have treated over 10,000 patients with its revolutionary atrial fibrillation ablation technology, the HeartLight System. CardioFocus would like to thank you and the entire community which helped build CardioFocus and develop the HeartLight System. We invite you to celebrate this incredible milestone with us. Over nearly two decades, our community has helped us achieve our dream of utilizing a unique laser technology to bring life-changing results to patients.

CardioFocus was founded in the late 1990's at the Cape Cod home of our inventor/founder. The company began with a small group of friends and other talented engineers and scientists, some of whom still work for CardioFocus today. They worked together to co-invent the predecessors of today's HeartLight System. Over time, our current lesion generator (laser delivery mechanism) was created, which became an essential part of our current "laser balloon" product. As the company grew, the addition of many other great employees brought unparalleled knowledge and creativity which has helped us evolve our product through three generations of HeartLight. Today, patients are being treated with a best-in-class device, the HeartLight X3.

With the guidance of our initial clinical and scientific advisory board in the early 2000's, we developed a product ideally suited for a "one shot" approach to pulmonary vein isolation (PVI) for atrial fibrillation ablation. The initial enthusiasm from our clinical board members encouraged us to introduce an endoscope into our catheter so the procedure can be performed under direct visualization, and to make the balloon more compliant. Much of the very early pre-clinical work was conducted in the cutting-edge labs at the Mayo Clinic, Mass General Hospital, and the University of Oklahoma.

As the HeartLight System evolved, many other talented scientists, researchers and investigators supported CardioFocus by participating in the early pre-clinical and clinical studies. We are especially grateful to the Mt. Sinai team for the extensive pre-clinical work conducted in their lab. The results of these pre-clinical studies invariably led to first-in-human clinical studies at Homolce Hospital in Prague. We thank every clinical investigator, researcher and especially patient that participated in one of our clinical studies. Along the way, we developed strong, long-term relationships with several key suppliers and vendors who helped us design, manufacture and supply the HeartLight System.

None of these achievements could have happened without the confidence of our extraordinary group of investors, who believed in HeartLight and the CardioFocus employees and funded this incredible product and clinical development journey. As an independently operating company, we are grateful for the direction provided by our board of directors, investor group and leadership team. Their support has enabled CardioFocus to develop the infrastructure required to become a successful, global commercial company and to continue to provide high-quality products across three continents. HeartLight is represented globally by key distribution partners and we are indebted to our Japanese partner for their support and true partnership. Our worldwide partnerships with electrophysiologists and their nursing and technical teams, and hospitals have been an absolute key in treating 10,000 patients with the HeartLight System. We thank every doctor, nurse, EP lab technician and hospital staff member that made the achievement of this milestone possible. And last and most importantly, we thank the patients. We have always been and will continue to be a patient-centric company. THANK YOU!

We are extremely proud to continue to be part of advancing products for the treatment of patients with atrial fibrillation with the recent introduction of HeartLight X3.
